SENATOR BLAINE'S

Eulogy Upon the Late Senator Chandler,

DELIVERED IN THE U. S. SENATE,

JANUARY, 1880.

Mr. Chandler sprang from a strong race of men, reared in a State which has shed lustre on her commonwealths by the gift of her native born and native bred. She gave Webster to Massachusetts, Chief Justice Chase to Ohio, General Dix to New York, and Horace Greeley to the head of American Journalism.

Mr. Chandler left New Hampshire before he attained his majority, and with limited pecuniary resources sought a home in the inviting territory of the North-west. He had great physical strength, with strong powers of endurance, possessed energy that could not be overtasked, was gifted with courage of a high order, was imbued with principles which throughout his life were indelible, was intelligent and well instructed, and was in all respects equipped for a career in the broad and splendid region where he lived and grew and strengthened and prospered in public.

For a long period following the Second War with Great Britain the Territory of Michigan was governed by one of the most persuasive of American statesmen, and whose pure and honorable life, whose grace and kindness of manner, and whose almost unlimited power in what was then a remote frontier Territory, had enabled him to mold the vast majority of the early settlers to his own political views. When Mr. Chandler reached Detroit General Cass had left the theatre of his late reign—for I judge it might well be called—and assumed control of the War Department under one of the strongest administrations that ever governed the country.

MR. CHANDLER'S STRONG CONVICTIONS.

The great majority of young men at twenty years of age naturally drifted with a current that was so strong, but Mr. Chandler had inherited certain political principles which were strengthened by his own convictions as he grew to manhood, and he took his stand at once and firmly with the minority. He was from the outset a strong power in the political field, though not until his maturer years, with fortune inclined and the border struggles of life crowned with victory, would he consent to hold any public position, but he was in all office conflicts which raged for twenty years, and which ended in changing the political mastery of the State. It is not a matter of wonder that personal estrangements so carried in such a prolonged and bitter controversy, without, indeed, the loss of manly respect, and in one of the most exciting periods of the struggle, General Cass spoke pretty of Mr. Chandler's acquiring the location of Chandler's acquisition. It was just three years afterward, as Mr. Chandler delighted to tell with good-natured and pardonable boasting, that he carried as General Cass a letter of introduction from the Governor of Michigan, which so impressed the General that he caused it to be publicly read in the chamber and placed on the permanent files of the Senate. It is to the honor of both these great men that complete cordiality of friendship was restored, and thus in the hours of supreme peril to the Nation which came soon after, General Cass and Mr. Chandler stood side by side in maintaining the union of the States by the exercise of the war power of the Government. They sleep their last sleep in the same beautiful cemetery near the city which was so long their home, under the soil of a State which each did so much to honor, and on the shores of the lake whose commerce the one widespread, spanned by their lives, had been so greatly promoted by their efforts.

HIS EARLY SENATORIAL ASSOCIATES.

The anti-slavery agitation which broke forth with great strength in 1854, following the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, met with partial reaction soon after, and in 1856 Mr. Buchanan was chosen to the Presidency. Mr. Chandler took his seat for the first time in this body on the day of Mr. Buchanan's inauguration. It was the first public station he had ever held, except the Mayoralty of Detroit for a single term, and the first to which he had ever been a candidate, except in 1852, he consented to be the Auburn hope of the Whigs in the contest for Governor of Michigan. When he entered the Senate the Democratic party bore undisputed sway in this chamber, having more than two-thirds of the entire body. The party was led by resolute, aggressive, able, uncompromising men who played for a high stake, and who played for the full game of power to win, neither to quit till upon the hazard of the die. The party in opposition to which Mr. Chandler belonged was weak in numbers, but strong in character, intellect and influence. Seward, with his philosophy of optimism, his deep study in the working of political forces and his eminence of rhetoric was its accepted leader. He was upheld and sustained by Sumner with his wealth of learning and his burning zeal for the right; by Fessenden, long philosophic thinker, Senator from Maine, Jim Bumner, best heroic logician; self-stalled as former, than either; by Wade, who in battle and hand-to-hand conflict with any Democrat in the days of the Common wealth, would have fearlessly followed the Protector in the expulsion of an illegal Parliament or drawn the sword of the Lord and Gideon to smite hip and thigh the Amalekites, who appeared again in the persons of the Cavaliers; by Collamer, profound, learned, pure, high-minded—a Connecticut Yankee by birth and in fact; by John P. Hale, who never faltered in his devotion to the anti-slavery cause, and who had, earlier than any of his associates, broke his allegiance with the old parties and given his eloquent voice to the cause of the despised Nazarenes; by Trumbull, capable, unstirring, the first Republican Senator from that great State which has since added so much to the grandeur and glory of our history; by Hamlin, with long training, with devoted fidelity, with undaunted courage, who came new to the conflict of ideas with a State behind him with its faith, and in its force, and who above all the illustrious Senate of 1857 is with us to-day; by Cameron, with wide and varied experience in affairs, with consummate tact in the government of parties whose active political life began in the days of Monroe, and who after a prolonged and stormy career still survives by reason of strength as to years, with the strong attachment of his friends, the respect of his opponents, the hearty good wishes of all—into association with these men Mr. Chandler entered when in his forty-fourth year.

HIS GREAT INFLUENCE.

His influence was felt, and felt powerfully, from the first day. A writer at the time said that the effect of Chandler's coming was like the addition of a fresh division of troops to an army engaged in a hand-to-hand conflict with an encumbering foe. He encouraged, upheld, inspired, coerced others to do things which he could not do himself, and which others could not have done without him. His first four years in the Senate were passed in a hopeless minority, where a sense of common danger, banishment and rivalry, checked jealousy, tamed down ambition, and produced that effect of harmony, of splendid discipline, which won the most signal and far-reaching of all our political victories in the election of Abraham Lincoln to the Presidency. Changed by this triumph, and the startling events which followed, into a majority party in the Senate, the Republicans found many of their ablest and ablest leaders trained only to the duties of the minority, and not fitted to assume with grace and dilligency the duties of administrative leadership. They had been so long studying the science of attack that they were awkward when they felt the need and assumed the responsibility of defence. They, like some of the British regiments in the campaign of Orange, said there was no fortress of the French which could resist them, and none that was safe in their hands. It was from this period that Mr. Chandler became more widely known to the whole country, achieving almost at a single bound what we term a National reputation. His defiant attitude in the presence of the impending and overwhelming danger of war; his superb courage under all the doubts and reverses of that terrible struggle between brethren of the same blood; his readiness to do all things, to dare all things, to endure all things for the cause of victory for the Union, his ardent support of Mr. Lincoln's Administration in every war measure which they proposed; his quickness to take issue with the Administration when he thought a great campaign was about to be ruined by what was termed the Fabyan policy; his inspiring presence, his burning zeal, his sleepless vigilance, his broad sympathies, his prompt decision, his eager patriotism, his crowning faith in the final result, all combined to give to Mr. Chandler a great rank among those honorable and devoted men who in our war history are entitled to stand next to those who led the mighty conflict on the field of battle. To portray Mr. Chandler's services for the ten consecutive years after the war closed, would involve too close a reference to exciting questions still in some sense at issue.

A CONSTANT INTELLECTUAL GROWTH.

In that long period of service and in the shorter one that immediately preceded his death, those who knew him well could observe a constant intellectual growth. He was fuller and stronger and abler in self-reliance and in debate the last year of his life than ever before. He entered the Senate originally without any practice in parliamentary discussion. He met it one of the most forcible and most fearless antagonists that could be encountered in this Chamber. His methods were learned before his pleas and yet eloquent, aggressive and yet caught a fearless authority from his attitude. What he knew he knew with precision. The powers he possessed were always at his command, and he never declined a challenge to the lists. "Here am I" was his motto, and his entire senatorial career and his life, indeed outside, seemed guided by that spirit of bravery which the greatest of American Senators exhibited, in the only house he ever made when he ignored to Mr. Calhoun the classic defiance, "Cunctaque terrae moenia cum metu cant more venit aut victoria lenta?"

Mr. Chandler's fame was enlarged by his successful administration of an important Cabinet position. Called by President Grant to the head of the Interior Department by telegraphic summons, he accepted without reluctance and without distrust. His eighteen years of positive and uncompromising course in the Senate had borne the inevitable fruit of many enmities, as well as the rich reward of countless friends. The appointment was severely criticised and unsparingly condemned by many who a year later were sufficiently just and magnanimous to withdraw their harsh words and bear generous testimony to his executive ability, his painstaking industry and his unbroken integrity, and to his admirable talent for thorough organization and to his peculiar capacity and grateful dispatch of public business. What his friends had before known of his character and his capacity, the chance of a few brief months gave an administrative position had revealed to the country and had placed in history.

A MAN OF GENEROUS NATURE.

It would not be just even in the most jealous indulgence conceded to eulogy to speak of Mr. Chandler as a man without faults. But assuredly no enemy, if there be one above his lifeless form, will ever say that he had mean faults; they were all on the generous and large side of his nature. In managing his private fortune he never exceeded the bound of flesh, he never ground the faces of the poor, he was never a hard man to an honest debtor unable to pay. His wealth came to him through his own great ability, devoted with unremitting industry for a third of a century to honorable trade, in that enlarging, ever-expanding region whose commercial relations he was among the earliest to foresee, and to appreciate. To his friends Mr. Chandler was devotedly true. Like Cobb in Congress, he did not use the word "friend" lightly and without meaning, nor did he ever pretend to be friendly to a man whom he did not like. He never dissembled. To describe him in the plain and vigorous Saxon which he spoke himself, he was a "true friend, a hard hitter, an honest hater."

In that inner circle of home life, sacred almost from reference, Mr. Chandler was admirable in devotion, inexhaustible in affection, and exceptionally happy in all his relations. Whatever of sternness there was in his character, whatever of roughness in his demeanor, whatever of irritability in his temper, were odd and all laid aside when he met at his own hearthstone, or dispensed graceful and generous hospitality to unnumbered guests. There he was born of his best, and there his friends loved to recall him. "As Burke said of Lord Keppel, he was a wild stock of pride on which the tenderest of heads had grafted the milder virtues.

A sore worse words have condemned many generations of men tells us that when death comes every one can see its deplorable and grievous side; only the wise can see cause for reconcilement. Let us be wise to-day, and celebrate the memory of a man who stood on the confines of life without once feeling its weakness or realizing its decay, who passed sixty-six years in this world without losing a single day of manly activity or physical strength, and who had a business career of great length and unbroken prosperity, who had attained in public life a fourth election to the Senate of the United States, an honor enjoyed by fewer men in the Republic than were in the Senate of Rome, and who strengthening with his years stood higher in the regard of his countrymen, stronger with his constituency, nearer to his friends and dearer to a kindred, at the close of his career than on any preceding day of his eventful life.

STATE NEWS.

Cumberland.

The Portland Argus says: Last Tuesday night, Mirabel Cole, aged fifteen years, died, or at least was supposed by the attending physician to die, and on Wednesday morning the body was prepared for burial, and the coffin ordered. We say seemed to die, for her heart ceased to beat, and a mirror placed to her life showed not the slightest trace of moisture, proving the breath had left her body. Although the girl seemed dead, yet her feet did not grow cold, as did the rest of her body, but kept warm. One symptom of the dead girl also, when raised up by the mother, would close without the mother's aid. The body continued in that state Wednesday, Thursday and till Friday afternoon, when a sudden change seemed to occur in what is sudden change seemed to occur in the appearance of the body, and the warmth left the feet and the eyelid when lifted, remained in that position until pressed down by the finger. Until last Friday afternoon there was not the slightest sign of decomposition and then only revealed itself by the least possible odor. It is a singular case, and it remains for them learned in materia medica to explain it satisfactorily.

HOW TO KEEP BOYS AT HOME.

"A Farmer's Son," in an intelligent letter to the Rural World, gives a frank statement of his views as to the reason why the young folks leave the farm, and the means most likely to stop the exodus. There is good sense in what he says, and it is worthy the consideration of all concerned:

Farmers' boys are human, and just as long as the present treadmill system of farming is pursued, just so long will they crowd into cities that are already full to overflowing, and stand behind counters at starvation salaries, or try to elbow their way into professions that afford only one chance in ten of making a living. Farming as conducted by a great many, (I do not say that all farmers are so), is a perfect drudgery. I do not wonder that the sons tire of it, and become willing to do anything in a city rather than farm. If a farmer owns a good farm and has three or four sons, or five or six (which very often happens), instead of contenting himself with enough he imagines he has not half enough for the boys, so he buys another farm and goes in debt for it. Then comes the struggle to pay interest and meet payments. The farmer works and his family work. They work from Monday morning till Saturday night, and some of them on Sunday. They have no time for recreation, and no inclination for it. The house goes unpainted and the yard fence tumbles down.

Improvements cost time and money, and the farmer who is in debt can spare neither. Is it strange that boys and girls, too, become weary of a pursuit out of which all the brightness seems to be crushed? There is no reason why a farmer's life and a farmer's home should not be just as pleasant as any one's, if he will content himself without owning all the landgrant John's him. Instead of trying to keep up his neighbors, he should devote some of his spare cash to the improvement of his home. He should have books and music and pictures. If there is any musical talent in the family, he should cultivate it. Instead of stopping to consider what the cost of a musical instrument would amount to a hundred years hence at compound interest, he should consult the present good of his family and get one. Whenever farmers' sons and daughters can have more of the pleasant things in life and less of the cold and unsocial, then and not till then will they be satisfied to stay on the farm and help to make it what it really is (or rightly conducted), the most pleasant of all pursuits.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE TRIBUNE ALMANAC, which has become as popular as it is valuable for 1880 is issued in uniform style with its many predecessors and is for sale at Bugbee's. It is not only a good finance book but is also an authority on a great variety of matters, especially the careful prepared statistics which it annually presents, and statistics of special value to business men. It is one of the best counting house almanacs published and has a large sale in this city.

NEW MAGAZINES.

WIDE AWAKE for February has a refreshing historical frontispiece, illustrating an incident in the life of Queen Charlotte, for which Jennie M. Burr has written a poem entitled A Crown and a Letter. The popular story writer H. E. W. S. follows with an excellent story, Granny Lake's Courage. Illustrated by spirited pen-and-ink drawings. Miss Amanda B. Harris has a long, well-illustrated article concerning A Chinese Mission School in Boston. Miss Lizzie W. Champney has a story that will delight all little girls about Silver Bonbrights and her Rubber Baby, accompanied by pictures drawn by Champ from his experience in Brazil.—L. J. Bates has an after-Christmas story worth thinking about, called What Jennie did with her Christmas Present. Mary Wager-Fisher tells about Kanuette's Live Baby, and Belle Lawrence gives The Other Side of the Story, for which Palmer Cox has made some very funny pictures. The Jewell Town, by Mrs. Curwen, gives an account of a famous settlement in India, a model of which is shortly to be on exhibition at the Boston Art Museum. The two serials, Five Little Peppers and Two Young Housekeepers, are full of interest, and the American Artist paper on Quartley, the marine painter, has a fine Isles of Shoals picture. The first of the Concord Picnic Days, by G. B. Bartlett, is gossippy about Thoreau, and gives directions for a spirited out-of-doors game called Fast Runners. Poems, pictures, Music and Tangles complete an excellent number. Ella Farman, Editor, D. Lothrop & Co., Publishers, Boston, Mass.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE. The number for the week ending January 31st, has the following valuable contents: First Impressions of the New World, by the Duke of Argyll, conclusion, Fraser's Magazine; Dr. Johnson, British Quarterly; Adam and Eve, part IV, by the author of Dorothy Fox, advance sheets; Life at High Pressure, Macmillan; How I Fell among Thieves, Blackwood; Annie Keary, Day of Rest; Dustyards, by the Hon. Mia Palmer, Themistius; The Future of Siberia, Spectator; Tall Music, Saturday Review; The Rate of the Old, Spectator; The American Artificial Production of the Diamond, Nature; and the usual choice poetry and miscellany. The serial story above mentioned, by the author of Dorothy Fox, and another by Mrs. Oliphant have been recently begun, and the publishers present to new subscribers for 1880 the six numbers of 1879 which contain the opening chapters of both. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

THE WORK OF THE SESSION.

The Governor's Closing Speech.

Augusta, February 3 All of those members of the Legislature who went home on Saturday to spend the Sabbath with their families, resumed to day and have resumed their labors this afternoon, seemingly refreshed from their brief respite from the business of the session will be dispatched with energy, and, as the Reg ular sessions are thoroughly united on all questions of importance, the work of legislation will be brought to a close as soon as it is consistent with the due interest and the requirements of the hour.

The Governor's Message.

The long-looking message of Governor Dingley will contain several important recommendations to the Legislature, which will be acted upon favorably. It will be an important State paper of about the usual length, and will be possessed of more than ordinary interest, on account of the way in the Governor will treat, and the interest he will manifest the legislature

The Postponers.

During the present week it is believed that the French cards in the Senate will be all cleaned by those legally elected to the seat. Of the sixty Patriot Reps contested seats in the House some forty have already come back, leaving some twenty who are Democrats. Of this number considerable will not return, or at least they have given no positive terms that they will not take their seats, and in case they stay away the Legislature will undoubtedly decide the seats of these recreant members vacant and order new elections. It will then remain with their constituents to send new Representatives or go unrepresented.

The Ghost Conspirators.

Strike talk about the capital is evident that nothing short of having the leaders in the great conspiracy brought before the bar of justice will handy the people. Disappointed and utterly cowards the deluded and misguided followers of treasonous men all well enough, but for the leaders these should be no leniency, abatement or amnesty shown. The repression of the traitor, the curse of popular government, the maintenance of free institutions, the will of the people as expressed at the polls and the purse and sword of the ballot box, all demand that the leading conspirators in the great infamy shall be punished if there is any law that can reach them. Their crimes are too great to allow them to escape punishment other than the condemnation of an indignant people. They will probably have an opportunity to grapple with the laws which they have pretended to respect.

A Treasonous Majority.

Our Senator of Bangor, who has been drawing Salisbury to stump the State, declared during a local excursion, that nothing gave him so much pleasure as to be a Republican, he gave it as his opinion that the Democratic party was composed of the finest men in the State, and if he was a Democrat he would vote with them. Their record and the good to allow them to escape punishment other than the condemnation of an indignant people. They will probably have an opportunity to grapple with the laws which they have pretended to respect.

Editorial.

The Democrats are greatly agitating the only set of delegates to their National Convention. Of the several names I have mentioned the delegates, one was a friend of Governor Garcelon, and from what I have heard of the Governor's views he is opposed to anything up that class.

Proceedings in Senate.

(By electric wire.)

Mr. Dunham rose at 4 P. M. to the latest petition long personally for, and some remonstrance against a change of ward 2 Brunswick, and an incorporation into city, without the knowledge of how the citizens of same made by citizens.

Referred to the ensuing, we are asking no new power already possessed by the city of Brunswick.

Mr. Dunham also presented petition of Wm. H. Hall & others for a change in the Brunswick Bank.

Referred to the ensuing, we are asking no new power already possessed by the city of Brunswick.

Mr. Dunham also presented petition of Wm. H. Hall & others for a change in the Brunswick Bank.

In Brunswick, for the completion of certain canals and the work, dated March, that the Legislature will undoubtedly ratify the action of the Governor in approving the bonds of Augusta, and the completion of the canal, and the appointment of Commissioners to examine the work, and report to the Governor, and the Governor to issue his proclamation upon such report.

Mr. Dunham also presented petition of Lewis Pettengill & others for the repeal of the charter of the Kennebec Water District, and the appointment of Commissioners to examine the same and report to the Governor, and the Governor to issue his proclamation upon such report.

Mr. Dunham also presented petition of Lewis Pettengill & others for the repeal of the charter of the Kennebec Water District, and the appointment of Commissioners to examine the same and report to the Governor, and the Governor to issue his proclamation upon such report.

An act was proposed to establish a Municipal Court at Waterville. Petition presented. Of Reuben Hale of Hancock county asking that aldermen be included in the probationary list; of H. M. Bryant and others for a railroad from Ellsworth village to Bluehill village; of David Talbot and others for a charter to supply citizens of Scotland with water taken from natural springs and artesian wells.

A petition from members of the Somerset County bar for restoration of the number and salaries of the Supreme Judges, was presented.

Vacancy Elected.

Senator Portis of Somerset, took his seat at the executive board and Hon. H. Brown, of Minot, in the House. Others are coming to hold further from their constituents. Col. Andrew M. Benson, of Pownal, who is on Governor Davis' staff, is a candidate for the position of State Liquor Agent. He has a strong petition signed by his leading townsmen and business men of the State. J. H. Millikin, of Portland, has been appointed to a temporary clerkship in the Secretary of State's office. Governor Davis will return to the city by pullman train to-night.

Washington, D. C. Feb'y 4th.

Senate.

The Judiciary Committee to-day will submit to the Senate a report in favor of the constitutional amendment to the effect that the Senate shall be composed of two Senators from each State, to be elected by the people of the State, and not by the Legislature, as at present. The report is considered unusually strong and will be taken up at the next session of Congress. Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, will submit a minority report, and Senator Thurman, of Ohio, will submit a minority report. The report will be taken up at the next session of Congress.

CUTICURA REMEDIES

Unite speedily and permanently cured Humors of the Skin and Scalp of Children and Infants after all other blood purifiers and skin remedies have failed.

This treatment prescribed in such cases is mild in action, and may be used on the youngest infant with the most delicate skin. The Cuticura Resolvent, a perfectly pure and powerful blood purifier, and the external use of Cuticura, the great skin cure. The Cuticura Soap should be the only soap applied to the diseased skin for cleansing purposes.

HUMOR ON A CHILD

Since birth cured, after faithful Medical Treatment had failed.

Messrs. Weeks & Potter, Gentlemen:—My little son, two years of age, had a humor on one side of his nose since he was born, which during the last four months has spread over the middle third of the face, the whole of the side of the head. It must have itched and irritated like a great deal, as he scratched the surface all the time, to relieve the itching. We tried various remedies by advice of friends and my physician, without benefit, until I found Cuticura, which proved the delight of the relapsing and inflammable, and gladly cured him.

Respectfully, JOHN L. SCERT,
Boston, April 17th, 1876.

NOTE. Once cured, the skin may be rendered soft and fair by using the Cuticura Soap exclusively for toilet or nursery purposes.

CHILDREN AND INFANTS.

Most Cures of Skin and Scalp Affections by the Cuticura Remedies.

Fred. Behren, Esq., Cashier Stock Growers' National Bank, Pueblo, Colorado, writes: "I am so well pleased with its effects on my baby, that I feel it my duty to say to you that Cuticura is a wonderful cure, and is bound to become very popular as soon as its virtues are known to the masses."

J. S. Weeks, Esq., Town Treasurer, St. Albans, Vt., says in a letter dated May 5: "It works to a charm. My child's head is entirely cured, the hair coming in nicely, and has nearly cleared the face of sores. I have recommended it to several, and Prof. Fitch has ordered it for them."

Mrs. E. A. Cook, 1 Malin St., Boston, says: "My little 4 year old, eighteen months old, has what the doctors call Eczema. We have tried most everything we could hear of without benefit, and she is almost a new child, and we feel very happy."

PRICKLY HEAT.

Incidental to the Steam Climate.

Messrs. Weeks & Potter: Gentlemen,—Enclosed please find order for another large supply of Cuticura. The small one that I received some time ago has been very efficacious, especially in Prickly Heat for Miss B., as some have had it in Texas during it about.

Yours truly, THOMAS W. DUCKLEY.
Mason, Texas, Sept. 23, 1878.

CUTICURA is a most valuable external application. It heals all sores, inflammations, and relieves the skin, restores the hair when destroyed by scalp diseases, removes dandruff and keeps the scalp clean and the hair soft and healthy. It is an exquisite skin beautifier, and is sold everywhere. Every one, like the Cuticura Soap, which is particularly recommended to mothers for cleansing the hair and skin of infants and children. Nothing else will do so well as Mo Normal, and is the most fragrant and refreshing pomp for the nursery and bath of any yet produced.

It rests have our assurance that these remedies contain nothing injurious to the youngest infant, without exception, and may be used from the hour of Dr. Hayes and Prof. Merrick accompanying each remedy.

The Cuticura Remedies are prepared by Weeks & Potter, Chemists and Druggists, 360 Washington Street, Boston, and for sale by all Druggists. Price of Cuticura, small boxes, 50 cents; large boxes, $1; Resolvent, $1 per bottle; CUTICURA SOAP, 25 cents per cake; by mail, 35 cents, three cakes, 75 cents.

COLLINS VOLTAIC ELECTRIC PLASTERS

They destroy all tendency to inflammation by drawing or toning the system into healthy action. Unlike other imitative, they are strictly electrical. Worn over the pit of the stomach, they prevent Ague and Liver Pains, inflammation of the Kidneys, Bilious Colic, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Cramps, and pains.

IN THE POLITICAL FIELD

the Weekly and Semi-Weekly will continue to advocate the principles of the Republican Party, which distrusts of to be indispensable to the highest and best welfare of the country. Fearless and independent in its views, it will endeavor to present and firmly maintaining what they believe to be right, they will avoid factious and unfair party criticism. The Presidential election and the important issues it involves, the proceedings of the Republican National Convention, and the Democratic Convention which follows it, will be fully and impartially reported, and the Weekly and Semi-Weekly will make the coming year one of the most interesting in the history of the country. The Weekly and Semi-Weekly Republican and Democratic Courier will be the recognized organ of the Republican Party of the State, and will advocate the principles of the party in the columns of which that paper has steadfastly maintained while in many quarters,

THE DAILY AND COURIER will be sent by mail postage paid, at the following rates, invariably in advance:

Daily, one year, $6.00 for 6 months, $3.00 for 3 months. Semi-Weekly, $2.00 for one year, $1.00 for six months, $0.50 for the session of the Legislature.

THE BANGOR WEEKLY COURIER

is the largest weekly paper published in New England. Every issue is a Newspaper of 8 pages, containing forty columns of matter, or 320 columns in the year. It gives up to the hour of going to press, and in addition to the Foreign, General and State News, it contains a Farmers' Department, conducted by a Practical Farmer, Market Reports, Literature, Miscellany, Stories, Poetry, Humor, Fashions and other Articles, with a large amount of Interesting Reading.
